The city with a sports heart

Often, and with good reason, Zadar is called the city of sport, because Zadar is the city whose clubs and individuals were many times European and World champions in different sports. Through the centuries Zadar was an administrative and cultural center, some sports were played here for the first time not only in Croatia but also in this part of Europe.

Zadar is the cradle of many sports in Croatia, like chess, the first elements of hiking, and as early as 1882 the first rowing races were recorded.

The first official handball match in Croatia was held in Zadar in 1948, and the first competition in diving was held in 1929. Zadar is also the cradle of basketball in Croatia and we are very proud of it. Organized basketball started on October 1, 1930, when the men's basketball club was founded, and shortly after that female basketball is born and it has a long history as well.

One of the most famous basketball legends that started his career in Zadar is Krešo Ćosić, who has studied and played basketball at the American University Brigham Young from 1969 -1973. In 1996 he entered the Hall of Fame, which proved his greatness and made us extremely proud.
